Let's Start!

A Public Service Announcement

Learning Outcome

Identify and describe events in the news in a range of social and work contexts.

Ask your partner:

- What public issues are important to you? Why?
- If you could tell the public something important, what would it be? Why?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about nature and the animal world.
- I can show that I understand someone's feelings.
- I can ask for clarification or use rhetorical questions to emphasize a point.

Let's Explore!

Sally talks to Peter about a PSA she recently read. What is it about?

* A "PSA" is a public service announcement (a message to raise awareness or change public attitudes).

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Sally: Peter, did you get my e-mail? I forwarded you an online brochure I got the other day. I thought you might be interested.

Peter: Yeah, I'm just looking at it now ...

"... wildlife enforcement officers make a difference. They work to protect our environment on a daily basis. Nations work together controlling the illicit trade of endangered species. This international trafficking of wildlife happens worldwide. Our officers make sure that offenders cannot avoid punishment by simply crossing into another country.

Wildlife enforcement officers endeavor to protect those plant and animal species which are threatened again and again through the unlawful actions by hunters and poachers. These actions include:

- The poaching of migratory birds
- The killing of endangered species
- The trafficking of endangered species
- The illegal importing or exporting of wildlife

I'm not sure what you are trying to tell me Sally. Are you saying that I should be a wildlife enforcement officer?

Sally: I know you must be bored with your job right now ... Why not consider something that can make a difference in the world?

Peter: Hmmm, your work must be exciting for you as well, since you're taking the time to try and find me another career path! How's that working for you?

Let's Practice!

The poaching* of animals is a public concern.

*"Poaching": means illegally hunting wildlife.

Instructions: Choose the words from the Word Bank to correctly complete the paragraph. Use capitals where necessary.

Learning Points

Asking for Clarification and Emphasizing a Point

When you want more information from someone, you can use embedded questions.

You can emphasize a point by asking rhetorical questions.

Embedded questions are questions within other questions or statements. Often, you use the phrases Do you know ... , Do you remember ... , Can you tell me ... or Can you show me ... to start an embedded question.

For Example:

Direct question: What are you trying to say?

Embedded question: Can you tell me what you are trying to say?

You can emphasize a point by using rhetorical questions which are questions that don't need to be answered. They are said when the speaker wants to express their feelings about a situation. The speaker does not expect the listener to actually give an answer.

For example:

What are you going to do? (when there is nothing to be done)

How about that? (when you want to make a point)

Examples:

- Can you clarify what you're trying to say?
- I'm not sure what you're trying to tell me.
- How's that working for you?

Learning Points

Showing That You Understand Someone's Feelings

In conversation, one way to keep the conversation going is to show empathy. This means showing that you understand the other person's feelings or situation. You use must followed by an adjective when you want to empathize with someone.

You use must and an adjective (either in its ED or ING form). When you use the -ED form, it refers to the feelings that a person has. When you use the -ING form, it refers to the thing that is causing feelings.

For example:

You must be delighted.

You must be nervous.

They must be surprised!

It must be terrifying to do that!

Examples:

- Your work must be exciting!
- You must be bored with your job right now.
